Dr. T. D. Worthington

When you became a Christian, your first act was to accept Christ as your Lord and Saviour. You dethroned yourself; you renounced the flesh and asked our Lord to take His rightful place on the throne of your life. It would have been ideal if that was a one-time event, but you know it wasn't. Although your salvation was secure, it marked only the beginning of your transformation into Christ's likeness. And since that day, every step you've taken has called for a new and fresh renunciation of self.

One of the strongest signs that self overpowers us is a person's difficulty in saying, "I was wrong." Those simple words are so hard for some of us. Our Lord, who sets the example for us in many ways, can't give us personal examples in this area because He was never wrong, so He never had to admit it. Of course, the Bible does give us quite a bit of instruction in this area. James 5:16 says, "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed." Then we have Proverbs 28:13 which says: "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper: but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy." James mentions healing, and Proverbs mentions getting a fresh start. The Bible makes it sound so easy, but we all know it is not.

First, some people simply hate to admit errors. Some of us don't like to admit we made a mistake. God says that confessing our sins and failures will grant us a chance to clean up the mess. It may take a little time to rebuild a damaged testimony, but over time, He can give us a fresh start. One of the hardest things to admit is when you were wrong about your internalized belief system. Everyone has a belief system, even non-Christians. Everyone believes the world operates in a certain way and follows specific rules. Maybe we grew up accepting certain things, so we base our lives on them, whether they are accurate or not.

"I was always taught that a person who curses after they are saved should be disqualified from ministry." I don't think Peter would agree. "I have always believed that a believer who commits adultery is marred for life." David might argue that point. I am not condoning any of these things, but they are part of the internalized belief system of some folks, and it is hard for them to admit they are wrong. Some believe in salvation by works, confessing their sins to a priest, or fear losing their salvation, all because it is part of their internalized belief system.

It takes courage to admit you're wrong, especially when it involves ideas you've held for years or beliefs of those you respect. It demands growth, rethinking your actions and values, and recognizing you're wrong—if indeed you are.

The religious leaders who killed Jesus were unwilling to loosen their distorted theology enough to see that the Messiah would not be a conquering king, but a suffering servant. Those claiming to be the most godly people in Israel at the time, missed the Messiah because they refused to admit they were wrong. They wouldn't change their beliefs to align with what God was doing.

Next, let's talk about healing. Getting God's forgiveness is easy, and while it may not always be as simple, asking for forgiveness from others shouldn't be a major obstacle either. If you seek forgiveness, you confess, repent, and accept it. Then, it should be granted. Healing, however, is not always so simple. This is not about physical healing but emotional healing—a healing of the self and relationships. This kind of healing demands convincing yourself and others that you are truly repentant.

I Was Wrong, But...

This is when our creative streak really begins to show. "I was wrong, but it was your fault. Or perhaps, "Someone deceived me, so it was their fault"—or a thousand other reasons you did what you did. The fact is, all that might be true, but that kind of thinking will hinder real healing. Your thoughts and feelings aren't the only ones that matter. Even if you believe you're only 5% responsible and the other person was 95% wrong, you still need to accept your part. God holds us accountable for our mistakes, not for someone else's. You should focus on your 5% and acknowledge it to whoever it needs to be acknowledged to.

If we don't take responsibility and admit our role in failure, others won't be motivated to help us heal and restore. Why would they? Sometimes, even when we are at fault, we still like to control the narrative. "I did wrong, and I want you to restore me, but you must do it my way." Have you ever known someone like that? A person who, even amid failure, is still controlling, manipulative, self-absorbed, and insensitive towards others, and pushes to achieve their own agenda. Such a person usually cares mainly about themselves and sees others only as a means to an end.

Often, such a person cannot enjoy a mature, loving relationship because his thoughts are so self-focused. He knows little about sacrificial love for the benefit of others. He does not understand how to love unconditionally. He only gives to receive. He attempts to manipulate situations to serve his own selfish interests rather than those of others. People are seen as objects to be controlled, not individuals to be loved. Such a person will never experience genuine healing.

Finally, Let's Talk About A Fresh Start.

Often, the quickest way to rebuild a relationship is by admitting mistakes. But why in the world would anybody risk that kind of honesty? Simple, because it's worth the risk. The fresh start begins as we set aside this burden of "having to be right" and "fear of being wrong." When you realize you're wrong, dare to admit it. Do you remember when the curtain was lifted? It was then that the Wizard of Oz had the most to offer those who came seeking his help.

Now, I wish I could tell you that everything will always turn out fine if you confess and repent of your failures. However, it doesn't always work that way. Many times, admitting our guilt might still lead to a termination, a divorce, a loss of friendship, or some other painful consequence. Still, it doesn't make sense to excuse our failures and avoid that day of reckoning. We all make mistakes—many of them. We all sin and make poor decisions. We are all likely to stumble. But that's what the process of becoming more like Christ is about—Christians constantly working to step down from the throne of their lives and instead enthrone Christ, aligning their lives with God.

So, when was the last time you admitted to someone that you were wrong? Wrong, with no excuses and no hold-backs.

Dr. Worthington has been in the ministry nearly fifty years and serves as President of Pathway Ministries and Christian Bible College.

Let Love Be Our Motto!

Dr. Sherry Worthington

Have you ever been in a wonderful mood, and everything seemed to be going great? The weather is perfect, no crisis at the moment, and those around you seem to be happy. And your favorite part of the day is being out, spending time with someone you love. Isn't it sad how one incident can change the atmosphere?

We were at a store picking up a gift when the line slowed because cashiers were handling refunds. As we waited, people behind us grew disgruntled, but one customer was especially vocal. I stayed quiet, knowing that speaking up would cause more conflict, though I wanted to reassure her that the staff were trying their best and might be shorthanded. We often judge without knowing all the facts. When she finally left the line, those who had complained felt relieved and expressed gratitude that peace had returned.

Temporarily, this woman changed the mood. My husband and I had been talking, but grew quiet when she started speaking behind us. Others in line also became uneasy. Some joined in at first, but as her complaining intensified, everyone fell silent. When she finally left, the atmosphere shifted.

After I returned home, I began to reflect on what had happened earlier that day. I can only imagine what it would be like to live with this woman. It is probably very difficult to please her. A critical spirit affects our lives in so many ways. As a Christian, we have no business having a condemning attitude. It is surprising how many Christians have a critical spirit. What is accomplished by criticism? Condemnation only harms others. It is not given with an attitude of love. I Corinthians 16:14 states that everything we do should be done in love. Critical people are not correcting a situation. They are upset that something did not go their way. Often, they don't have all the facts and jump to conclusions. Many families and friendships have been torn apart by a critical spirit. I know of families and friendships that were damaged by unkind deeds or harsh words that criticized the actions of others. In two situations, the individuals were too proud to make it right with each other, and they have not spoken for years. Each thinks the other should apologize. The innocent bystanders were the children. The grandchildren could no longer see their grandparents, and the children of their friends could no longer see their friends. How sad! Worst of all, they both professed to be Christians.

Matthew 7 warns us of the consequences of a critical spirit. Verse 2 tells us that when we judge others, we will be judged the same way. Have you ever done that? I know many young parents will criticize the way other people are raising their children, but lo and behold, in a couple of years, they are doing the same thing. As people, we tend to notice these things, but our Lord notices them even more because He sees our hearts. When we are judgmental, it comes back to haunt us. When we see the wrongs of others, God brings them to light in us. He shows us how hypocritical we are. We are not to be looking for fault. We are to be witnesses and to show love.

Faultfinding is a negative attribute. Verses 3-5 speak of the mote and the beam. When we criticize others, it shows we have a bigger problem. In many cases, it is an indication of pride. Someone did not bow to our image, so we crucify them with our words. In Daniel, when Shadrach, Meshack, and Abednego did not bow to the image the king set up, he was filled with rage and fury. Why was he so angry? They did not bow to his values and his ideals.

He was willing to throw them into the fire because they dared to defy him. Don't we do the same thing? When we are critical of others, we throw them into our fire. Most of the time, we are not content to keep our criticism to ourselves; we must tell everyone we know.

When we criticize our brother, it reveals we have a bigger problem. The Scripture refers to this as the beam. Perhaps the beam is pride, but it may also be our reaction to the mote. Often, a person does something they shouldn't, and it is wrong. Unfortunately, our self-righteous attitude is a bigger problem than the original sin. Verse 5 calls us hypocrites when we feel superior to others. Until we get the beam out of our eye, until we deal with our own sin, we cannot help anyone else.

We do have a responsibility to help those who have strayed, but the Scriptures give strict instructions in these matters. For example, Galatians 6:1-2 teaches that those who are spiritual are to restore the fallen individual in a spirit of meekness, with a strong warning to consider ourselves lest we be tempted. Therefore, our attitude needs to be one of humbleness, realizing that, except for the grace of God, we could be in the same situation. Because of this, we need to restore with a heart of love and gentleness and bear each other's burdens. Let us be supportive and help each other along the way, as we all need each other.

May I Corinthians 16:14 always be our life's motto. “Let all your things be done with charity.” So, in every situation, let Christ's love shine through us!

Dr. Worthington has five children and twelve grandchildren. She serves as Principal of Pathway Christian Academy in Goldsboro.

Love is Distributed

Soon, it will be Valentine's season—the season of love. But never let us puff ourselves up, thinking that we originated love. God is love, and He delivered that love to His people. Then He commissioned and empowered us to share that love with the world.

We all know that love was first defined by God because God is love. God originated love, and love was then given to us through the finished work of Christ, leading to our salvation. This, in turn, prompts us to return love back to God. But then, what is supposed to happen?

Love is meant to be shared. In fact, the Bible seems to suggest that how we share it tests its original delivery to us. If I tell you I ordered a box of candy and then give you a piece, it proves it was delivered to me. The delivery of God's love to you and me is tested by how we share that love.

The Bible makes this clear. I John 4:7: “Beloved, let us love one another.” Verse 11: “Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.” Verse 21: “And this commandment we have from Him, that he who loveth God, love his brother also.”

So, God has given us love; we are called to share it. In other words, John might say, “Brothers and sisters, if you're not sharing God's love with others, perhaps you should examine yourselves and see if you have the love of God in you.”

The understanding of God's love through Christ clearly confirms God's love for us, but it also comes with a duty to spread that love to others.

That is the message we strive to share every day through the ministry of GoMix Christian Radio. Our mission is to spread the love of God to a world that needs it so desperately. We express our gratitude to all of our Faith Partners, Programmers, and Business Underwriters who help make our programming possible.

In this fallen, sin-cursed world, we are not perfect. Although the love we have for friends and family can be strong and seem unconditional, it is also imperfect. As we think of the sacrifices we would make for others, even with our imperfect love, how much more so should we be amazed at what our Heavenly Father has done and will do for us, His children?

This Valentine's Day, as you think of those special people in your life who mean the most to you, don't forget where love began. As you think of the sacrifices you would be willing to make for those you love, try to think of just how much more our Lord loves and cares for you! You are never alone. You are never unloved. He's your Perfect Valentine!

"For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Apples to Oranges

Dr. Glenn Mills

I am sure most of us have heard the statement, “You can’t compare apples to oranges.” Well, I would have to say I totally agree with that. But you can compare apples to apples and oranges to oranges. I am not a big fruit eater, but I do prefer apples over oranges. That may not be your choice, but it would be my choice.

However, there are some apples I do not care to eat. I do not like a soft apple; ever. My favorite apples come from the hills of North Carolina and Virginia. They are simply delicious! I remember as a boy my parents would go to the mountains in the fall of the year for a few days, most likely to escape their four lovable kids. Sometimes they would bring us back a small souvenir, but mainly they would bring back a case of those awesome mountain apples. As soon as they unpacked, I would put some of those apples in the fridge and get them cold. It makes my mouth water just to remember the cool sweetness of those apples. My point here is, all apples are not the same and I’m sure not all oranges are the same either.

In daily life, we make a lot of comparisons. We compare what store has the best meat prices. Kim’s parents have reached that wonderful age where they can tell you from week to week exactly what the meat prices are at each store in our area. Have you been to the mailbox lately? Believe me, the advertising department of these stores know the power of comparison.

As many of you know, my sweet, loving wife, Kim, is the Google queen. With the help of the internet, she is always looking for a deal. Not only in price, but she checks the “stars” for the item’s ratings by other customers as well. I’m so glad she didn’t look me up on Google before she agreed to marry me. I wonder how many stars I would have gotten (no comments needed, thank you). Like many of you, Kim and I like to eat out occasionally and through our process of comparison, we have a list of favorite restaurants. The same goes for other places we like to go and things we like to do.

When buying a car, we all compare prices, gas mileage, comfort, etc., but even then we most likely compare dealerships. And what about services businesses provide? As we all should know by now, cheaper does not mean better. There is still much truth to the old saying, “You get what you pay for,” even though sometimes I just end up paying for what I get. Woe is me and shame on them!

We use all types of things, thoughts, feelings, and experiences to make comparisons, which is not always good. Sadly, some Christians even compare churches. The minister must have the right preaching style. The praise and worship music must sound a certain way. The church facilities have to meet certain economic standards. The church programs must meet their needs without too much involvement from them. The people must be friendly, but not too friendly. We must find the place God desires us to be and serve, while not comparing it with what other churches are doing.

While there are many things we can compare, there is one thing we should never compare and that is comparing ourselves to others. While it is good to look at someone else for inspiration or motivation, we should never compare ourselves to someone else. God made each one of us special to do awesome things and be world changers with the gifts and abilities He has given us. It breaks my heart when I hear of people professing a different gender, not realizing God made them to be who they are. Changing that would be accepting less than they were created to be. Satan is a master at getting us to focus on what others can do, where they live, how they dress, and their gifting and talents.

One very valuable lesson I have learned over the years is that when I compare myself to others, it will steal my joy. I have never met a happy person who was comparing themselves to someone else. I remember once wanting to preach like a well-known preacher I knew. I started saying things the way he did and dressing like he dressed.

One morning while in prayer, God spoke to me and told me He did not need a duplicate of that person. Instead, He needed a Glenn Mills who would do what he had been created to do. Why do we seem to see other’s potential and yet not see our own? A wise person once said that the sun and moon both shine when it is their time. God made each of us different to accomplish different things. We don't have to be better, we just have to be ourselves. Can we improve? Certainly. Our main concern should be whether we are pleasing God with what He has given us to do and be.

If we try to be like someone else, then the world misses out on what God designed each one of us to be. We cause a void every time we compare ourselves to other people and try to be like them. How many are missing God's anointing that would be flowing through them if they would just be themselves? How many songs have not been written because they are marching to another's beat? How many hurts are not being healed because we're not sharing the hurts and pains that made us who we are? How much of the work of God has gone undone by His children because they are trying to be like someone else?

Even in the world's marketplace, there is great value in a "one of a kind." How much more valuable are you considering God did not create anyone else like you? Don't allow Satan to steal your divine identity. The most contented Christians I know are those who know who they are in Christ. He is the only one to whom we should ever compare ourselves. Our goal should be to be more like Him in every way. With the help of God's Word and His Holy Spirit we can become more like Jesus every day. We may look like ordinary fruit to the world, but we are the apple of God's eye.

When We Don't Feel the Love

There are those special times when we are walking hand in hand with God in perfect communication. The love between us is obvious. We can feel it. But sometimes, we feel like the love between us and our Heavenly Father has waned. We don't feel like reading our Bibles or praying. We are not holding His hand with the fervency that we have before. We don't feel the grip of His hand holding ours. Those times can be spiritually discouraging.

Sometimes, we have caused the distance between ourselves and Him. But when careful, Spirit-led examination of our hearts finds no sin to explain our feelings, we must recognize that we cannot trust our feelings. Charles Stanley, in his book, The Power of Love acknowledged that there are times when "the Bible seems cold, our prayers listless, and our commitment to church uncertain..." If our feelings control us then, we will sink into guilt and self-condemnation.

No matter how much we feel that we have left our Father, we can trust that He is still with us grasping our hand as much as He always does. Remember that love is more than a feeling. Love is a decision. We can renew our love for God by deciding to override feelings and making a decision to express love for Him even though it may not be what we feel.

Instead of trying to work up an enthusiasm aiming for a love for God, we should focus on God's love for us. When we understand the kind of love that God has for us, His everlasting love elicits a response. He gave His most precious treasure, knowing in advance the extreme price that it would cost. He did that, not for His friends, but for His enemies so that He could have fellowship with us. Romans 5:8 says, "But God commendeth (showed) his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Who does that? That is real love to its fullest extent. When we recognize His love for us, can we not respond likewise, sacrificing our desires? Let us make the decision to reciprocate, at least as much as we are humanly capable. Take a moment to lift your arms toward heaven, give Him a hug, and tell Him that you love Him. Ponder that!

Mrs. Connie Peters has two children and resides in Princeton, NC. Now retired, she formerly served as an instructor at Pathway Christian Academy in Goldsboro.
